

Steven Tyler speaks out after spill from Buffalo Chip stage

By The Associated Press

Related Articles:

- The Fives: Challenging the legend of Sturgis, biker rallies roar to life nationwide
- DUI, drug arrests down during 2009 Sturgis rally
- Aerosmith cancels summer tour after Tyler's fall
- The next best thing: Tribute bands fill Sturgis rally schedule
- Harley Ride-In Show today
- Aerosmith show ends after Tyler falls from stage/Tyler airlifted to local hospital
- Minnesota woman an author, biker, mom
- The Fives: From Pappy to the 50th to today, the arc of the Sturgis rally
- Steven Tyler speaks out after spill from Buffalo Chip stage
- The Fives: From Pappy Hoel to the 50th to today, the arc of the Sturgis rally
- Ride For Hope addresses suicide
- Citations, arrests up markedly in lead up to Sturgis rally
- Children's Home, Sturgis Motorcycle Museum hit Deadwood Legends Ride jackpot
- No shortcuts for rally courtgoers
- Know the rules or leave your guns at home

Steven Tyler is thanking the Sturgis police department and others who helped him after he fell off the stage during a performance at the city's famous motorcycle rally earlier this month.

In a lengthy statement issued Thursday, Tyler says he broke his left shoulder and needed 20 stitches in his head after the Aug. 5 accident at the Buffalo Chip Campground near Sturgis. The 61-year-old Aerosmith frontman also thanks the band's crew, the helicopter that evacuated him "for getting me outta there before I bled to death" and the doctors and nurses who treated him.

Tyler said thunderstorms delayed the band's set by an hour, then fuses blew and the audio systems failed shortly after the concert began.

"Well, I wasn't gonna go hide under the big top and play 'ROCK STAFF' and wait for everything to be fixed," Tyler says. "I wanted to go out to the crowd to continue the show."

He said he was doing "the Tyler shuffle" when he slipped and fell off the edge of the stage.

"I just want to say that I'm plain grateful that I didn't break my neck," he says. "In truth, after thousands of live shows, falling off the edge four times ain't too bad."

From Steven Tyler's big lips to your, ar, eyes. See the official statement the Aerosmith frontman sent out about his spill at the Buffalo Chip at the Copy Blog.

Print this page | Return to previous page